

Leadership By Design

You are a principal, a vice-principal, a guidance counsellor, a teacher in a high school. You are aware of promising Black and African-Canadian students who are currently in Grade 10 academic courses who you believe would benefit from having their high-school studies augmented by a high-quality leadership development program.

Our program is called Leadership by Design (LBD) and we are seeking a cohort of about 50 Grade 10 students from high schools across the GTA – Black students who are ambitious and willing to participate in a multi-year program which provides the resources, mentoring, encouragement and opportunities which amplify their talents and optimize their ambitions. In our program, both students and parents are part of a community of support and learning. Meetings are on selected Saturdays and at GTA university sites (now online during the current pandemic).

The LBD program is free and includes:

- Leadership skills
- Mentorship
- Skill-building workshops
- Conferences/ Seminars/ Webinars
- Cultural events
- Civic Engagement
- Scholarships
- Career exploration
- Student options
- STEM course by UofT
- Coding classes
- 1:1 Tutoring service - Ryerson U.
- Entrepreneurship classes - Ryerson U.

We need your help in identifying eligible students and encouraging them to apply for admission. We have found our best recruitment strategy is the school administrator or teacher who identifies prospects for our program and urges the student and parent to apply for admission. Parents are part of the admissions process. This is the fifth year delivering service and we are confident that the Leadership by Design program closes the opportunity gap for Black students. Applications are now invited by students who self identify as Black or African-Canadian and are enrolled in Grade 10 academic courses in September 2020.

The early-application deadline is Wednesday, October 7, 2020.
Space is limited. Students should apply early.
